

Integrated Library Management System (ILMS)

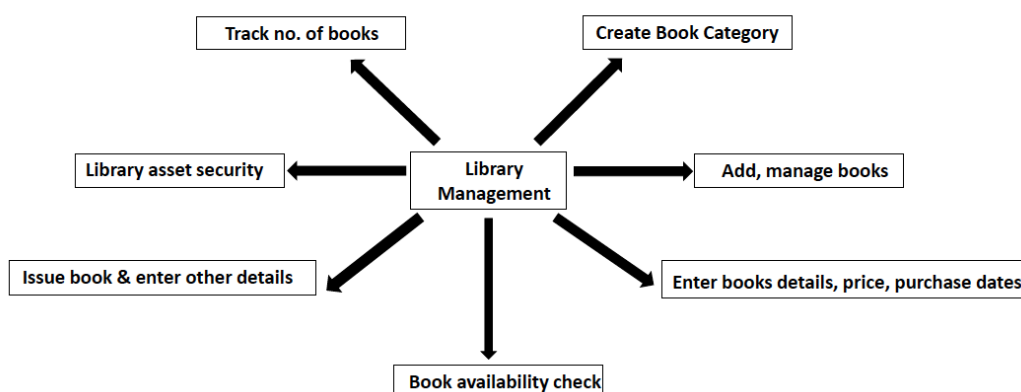

Library automation is indeed a crucial component of modern library management. With the exponential growth of knowledge in various fields, providing users with quick and efficient access to the information they need has become paramount. The primary goal is to ensure that the right book is available to the right user at the right time. To achieve this, institutions like VSIT are adopting automated library management software.

VSIT has taken the initiative to transition its library to a paperless environment by designing and developing its own library automation software. This software is customized to meet the specific needs and requirements of the institute. Manual methods for tasks such as acquisition, cataloguing, circulation, stock verification, and report generation can be time-consuming and less efficient. Library automation involves the use of software to streamline and improve these traditional library activities.

The Institute's Library Management Software, known as vMIS, is a fully automated system that facilitates various library functions. With vMIS, tasks such as cataloguing, tracking, and reporting are made more efficient, ensuring that users can access the resources they need in a timely manner. This transition to automation is essential in a world where the volume of information is constantly increasing, making it increasingly challenging to manage a library's resources and services manually.

Functions of ILMS

The Institute has introduced its own Library Management Software and is available to all through the vMIS system. All the Library functions are fully automated and are listed below.
