The media industry is seeing a paradigm shift with new trends and emerging possibilities, spurred by the evolving technology and industry growth. It is becoming difficult for those in this industry to keep pace with these trends. Shifting cultural behaviours, rising customer expectations and the on-going deviations are making it an arduous task for the industry to compete and adjust. Innovation is now the key.

This is the era of content generation. User generated content have created possibilities of sharing, collaboration, conversation and linkage of content and comments which makes platforms like Facebook and You Tube engaging and popular.

Since the younger generation prefers mobile platforms over their computer screen, content providers use technology to bring news and videos to the medium of choice and making their content accessible in multiple platforms through apps, websites or email subscriptions.

Owing to the increasing online presence of consumers, corporate companies have started turning to online advertising systems to market their products and services. From business executives to politicians, it has become an effective, cost-saving, reliable and time-consistent way to advertise.

Now-a-days it has become imperative to have a strong social media policy to attract consumers. Most businesses and media channels run a dedicated web portal along with a host of social media platforms that connect them with millions of readers and consumers globally. Moreover, social media offers viewers a chance to express their views freely, making the content more sensational.

The media and communication sector, which is poised to see a tremendous growth in the upcoming years is transforming rapidly. It is witnessing notable trends that would propel the industry further in the years to come. The evolving horizon of Mass Communication is luring the prospects of exciting careers and so the hype for education in this field is quite high.

Topics were allotted to each group in all the batches, as per their course specialization. Trainers interrogated each student about their presentations, to ensure that every student had made contribution in making the group ppt.

Second day focused on improving interview skills of the students. It started well with a power packed motivational speech, by renowned motivational trainers Mr. Sameer Narad and Mr. Akshay Dhamal. This speech was based on the power of human mind and it was simplified to students, to make them understand, how is our mind capable of achieving anything and everything, but only when it is put to proper use. An instance of a water experiment was shown, in which it is proven by a famous Japanese scientist Dr. Masaru Emoto, who says water has consciousness and it changes shape and structure based on our words. This proves, "the words that we speak, has the power to change our world". The trainer taught 2 powerful ways to use mind power to make every dream come true: - visualization and affirmations. This was followed by how diet plays an important role, difference between hard work and smart work, breathing exercise and super brain yoga.

Acting Workshop

The BMM Department of VSIT organised an acting workshop on 30th January, 2019. The workshop was held by the spontaneous actor Shiv Sir. The workshop commenced with a few acting basics which is the key to pursue acting. The next activity was improve monologue in which the students had to enact non-living things such as a bag, a lipstick, etc. which pushed their boundaries of imagination. After that a fun activity of "Freeze & Release" was conducted wherein two or more people had to continuously converse until they were replaced by another student. In between these exercises, sir gave tips to the students on how to give a firm handshake, how to ace interviews, how to prepare for auditions, etc

One of the major statements that he focused on was "Every Person Is A Born Actor!" He emphasised on hard work and talent being important features of a good actor and also that the height, weight, colour of a person do not have much value. He also told the students that difficulties, obstacles and failures are the stepping stones of being successful.

In the latter half of the workshop, all the students were divided into groups and each group was given a product to advertise. By this activity he made sure that each and every person got an opportunity to act and made the students come out of their comfort zone. Few students were then given some individual acts on some serious issues which brought out the real actor in them, some of the hidden actors were also discovered in the workshop.

She shared her journey and experiences in the industry which left the students in awe.

'Ladies Special' (2003) her first made documentary was showcased for the students. It depicted the lives of the women traveling by Mumbai trains. Celebrating festivals, sense of togetherness, comfort and something as complex as giving birth in times of need. They found peace in the world of chaos around them. A train becoming something so special, a protagonist. It was a tangent never seen. As the documentary ended, a discussion was held with the students where all of their questions were answered and explained by our speaker's expertise.
